

Complaints to the BBC: February 2015

The BBC answered just over 16,000 complaints from the audience during February 2015. These ranged from a small number of complaints about alleged breaches of editorial guidelines through to a much larger collection of views about programme content and services.

Topics raised included complaints about some of the language and humour during The British Academy Film Awards.

There were also complaints about the closure of some audio formats on the BBC Radio iPlayer.

The BBC's responses to some recent issues can be read on the BBC Complaints website.
